8 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Case No. 3:12-cr-00121-MMD-WGC

9 Plaintiff,

ORDER

10 v.

11 BRET OGILVIE AND LINWOOD TRACY,
JR.,

12 Defendants.
13

14 Before the Court are numerous motions filed by Defendants Bret Ogilvie and 15 Linwood Tracy. The Court heard arguments from both Ogilvie and Tracy as to why the 16 Indictment should be dismissed. After considering the arguments from Defendants and 17 the United States, the Court denies each motion consistent with the reasoning set forth 18 below.

19 The Court's February 5, 2013, Order summarizes the factual allegations 20 contained in the Indictment. (See dkt. no. 64.) Relevant to these motions, Defendants 21 Ogilvie and Tracy have filed a total of 21 motions since January 25, 2013, many of them 22 repeating arguments contained in previously filed motions. For ease of analysis, the 23 Court groups the motions separately, organized by each Defendant and by the type of 24 motion.

25 I. BRETT OGILVIE'S MOTIONS

26 A. General Arguments

27 At the April 17, 2013, hearing, Ogilvie presented a number of broad arguments 28 challenging the validity of the Indictment. These arguments fall into three general

1 categories: a challenge to the Court's jurisdiction; Ogilvie's constitutional defense 2 against the Indictment; and challenges to a number of factual allegations presented in 3 the Indictment.

4 Ogilvie's first set of arguments concern the jurisdiction of the Court to preside 5 over this criminal case. Ogilvie argues that the United States has not established the 6 Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") as a government agency, that he is not a federal 7 citizen subject to suit in this District, that the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 8 left only one IRS district — the District of Columbia — so the district that oversees 9 Nevada has no authority to take any action with respect to Ogilvie, and that various 10 sources have opined that the United States is bankrupt. These facts together, Ogilvie 11 argues, render the Indictment void. These arguments are meritless. The Court finds no 12 legal basis to conclude that it lacks jurisdiction over Ogilvie's criminal prosecution. That 13 the IRS is an agency of the United States cannot be seriously questioned. See, e.g., 14 Salmon v. Dept. of Treasury, 899 F.Supp. 471, 472 (D. Nev. 1995) (rejecting this claim).
15 Ogilvie provides no support for his fanciful argument that the IRS lacks authority to 16 pursue its core tax collection function outside of the District of Columbia, or his 17 argument that the Court cannot exercise criminal jurisdiction because he is purportedly 18 not a "federal citizen."

19 Ogilvie also invokes the Religious Freedom Restoration Act ("RFRA") and the 20 Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses as affirmative defenses to the charges in the 21 Indictment. With respect to the Free Exercise Clause, Ogilvie argues that the 22 Indictment arises out of acts taken by the IRS and various government officials that 23 impeded upon his rights to free exercise without compelling justification and not in the 24 least restrictive mode possible. The Court does not doubt the strength of Ogilvie's 25 religious beliefs, and assumes, as it must, that the collection of income taxes 26 significantly burdens his free exercise rights. Nevertheless, courts have routinely held 27 that the federal government's taxing power cannot be resisted on the basis of a religious 28 objection, for the interest in maintaining an efficient and orderly taxation system is

1 compelling justification for burdens on religious freedom. The Supreme Court's broad 2 statement in United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 260 (1982) forecloses Ogilvie's 3 argument. Rejecting the free exercise claim of a member of the Old Order Amish who 4 sought to avoid payment of Social Security taxes, the court held that "religious belief in 5 conflict with the payment of taxes affords no basis for resisting the tax." Id.; see also 6 United States v. Cromhurst, 629 F.2d 1297, 1300 (9th Cir. 1980) (rejecting as frivolous 7 defendant's argument that filing a tax return would violate his religious convictions); 8 Droz v. Comm'r Internal Revenue, 48 F.3d 1120, 1122-23 (9th Cir.1995) (holding that 9 the government's compelling interest in collecting social security taxes outweighs the 10 burden imposed on an individual's religious freedom); Welch v. United States, 750 F.2d 11 1101, 1108 (1st Cir. 1985) (religious belief did not excuse taxpayers from liability for 12 failure to comply with tax laws); Graves v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 579 F.2d 13 392, 393 (6th Cir. 1978) (holding federal income tax laws did not unconstitutionally 14 burden defendants' free exercise of religion); United States v. Genger, 842 F.2d 1295
15 (9th Cir. 1988) (same); United States v. Ramsey, 992 F.2d 831, 833 (8th Cir.1993) 16 (holding that the First Amendment does not afford a right to avoid federal income taxes 17 on religious grounds). Contrary to Ogilvie's contention, the passage of RFRA does not 18 impugn the validity of Lee and its progeny. Instead, RFRA restored the level of scrutiny 19 applied to laws that burdened religious exercise to that which existed before the 20 Supreme Court's decision in Employment Division v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872 (1990), 21 thereby ensuring the viability of the Lee line of cases. See Droz, 48 F.3d at 1122 n.2.
22 As a result, this Court appropriately relies on cases decided before 1990, including the 23 Lee decision.

24 Ogilvie also challenges the IRS' income tax collecting role as a violation of the 25 Establishment Clause, arguing that the income tax represents a tenant of socialism, 26 which he describes as a religion that the United States has established. This argument 27 likewise lacks merit, as he has not demonstrated that the income tax lacks a secular 28 purpose, advances a particular religion, or that it fosters an excessive government

1 entanglement with religion. See Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 612-13 (1971) 2 (establishing the test for determining whether government action violates the 3 Establishment Clause).

4 Finally, Ogilvie lodges various challenges against the factual allegations in the 5 Indictment, including the status of Tracy as his co-conspirator and allegations regarding 6 Klaich Animal Hospital. None of these factual attacks warrant dismissal, however.
7 These arguments go to the veracity of the government's claims against Ogilvie and 8 Tracy, and must be presented to a jury at trial. All arguments about the facts that 9 underlie the Indictment must be presented to a jury. Where, as here, probable cause 10 existed for a grand jury to indict Defendants, the Indictment must stand.

11 The Court turns now to each individual motion, and denies it per the reasoning 12 below.

13 B. Ogilvie's Motion to Strike Indictment (dkt. no. 52)

14 Ogilvie attacks the validity of the grand jury's indictment process, arguing that no 15 quorum was present at the grand jury, that the Indictment was not presented in "open 16 court," and the secrecy of the grand jury records violates the law. These arguments all 17 lack merit.

18 Fed. R. Crim. P. 6(f) requires at least 12 jurors who concur before an indictment.
19 This is presumably what Ogilvie means when he attacks the validity of the grand jury.
20 But he provides no evidence in support of his accusation, and there is no indication that 21 the grand jury indictment process was fundamentally flawed. Further, Fed. R. Crim. P.
22 6(f) requires that the grand jury "Return the indictment to a magistrate judge in open 23 court." Ogilvie argues that the Indictment was not presented to the magistrate judge, 24 but presents no evidence to that effect. In fact, the record shows that the Magistrate 25 Judge received the Indictment in open court. (See dkt. no. 4.)

26 As to the grand jury's secrecy, Ogilvie cites to United States v. Williams, 504 U.S.
27 36 (1992) for the proposition that another branch of the government may not tamper 28 with a grand jury. Although this is generally true, it does not support Ogilvie's argument

1 that grand jury records must be disclosed. Williams held that exculpatory evidence 2 need not be presented to an otherwise lawfully formed grand jury. Further, grand jury 3 proceedings remain secret, per Fed. R. Crim. P. 6(e)(2). See In re Grand Jury 4 Proceedings, 62 F.3d 1175, 1180 (9th Cir. 1995) (listing five factors which determine the 5 need for secrecy of grand jury testimony as “(1) the need to prevent the escape of 6 prospective indictees; (2) the need to insure freedom to the grand jury in its 7 deliberations; (3) the need to prevent subornation of perjury and tampering with 8 witnesses by targets of the investigation; (4) the need to encourage free disclosure by 9 witnesses before the grand jury; and (5) the need to protect those exonerated by the 10 grand jury from disclosure of the fact that they were under investigation.”). Ogilvie does 11 not provide any reason for disclosure of the grand jury proceedings or any related 12 documents.

13 Ogilvie also contends that the government has failed to disclose various 14 materials relating to its Indictment against him, in violation of Brady v. Maryland, 373 15 U.S. 83 (1963). He fails to provide, however, any evidence or credible argument as to a 16 Brady violation. This is merely a conclusory argument without any basis. Indeed, even 17 if the government has failed to make a Brady disclosure now, it is only required to make 18 a Brady disclosure in time for the defendant to make effective use of the material. See, 19 e.g., United States v. Vgeri, 51 F.3d 876, 880 (9th Cir.1995) (no Brady violation when 20 disclosure during trial still allowed the accused to make use of the evidence).

21 Ogilvie’s remaining arguments challenge factual assertions made in the 22 Indictment, including arguing that he possessed no criminal intent, that he did not 23 conspire with any other individuals in the commission of the allegedly illegal acts, and 24 that the various counts against him are duplicative. As explained above, trial is the 25 proper forum for contesting the factual basis for a criminal indictment, not in a pre-trial 26 motion to dismiss.

27 ///

28 ///

1 C. Ogilvie’s Motion to Dismiss (dkt. no. 53)

2 This motion addresses Ogilvie’s constitutional challenges to the Indictment. As 3 explained above, his Free Exercise Clause and Establishment Clause attacks on the 4 constitutionality of the IRS’ conduct fail as a matter of law. Accordingly, his Motion to 5 Dismiss on these grounds is denied.

6 D. Ogilvie’s Motion for Bill of Particulars (dkt. no. 54)

7 Ogilvie’s Motion includes a laundry list of documents he requests from the 8 government, including all evidence relating to his indictment, as well as a number of 9 nonsensical and irrelevant documents purportedly existing to justify the government’s 10 taxing function. These requests include, inter alia, overbroad requests for all employee 11 and personnel records of those IRS employees who have worked on his taxes, 12 computer records that detail financial records of a number of private and public federal 13 entities, and legal opinions on the definitions of the words “income” and “dollar.” There 14 are too many to recount here, and are overly burdensome to respond to and irrelevant 15 to his defense of the charges against him. Based on representations made by the 16 government in its briefings and during the April 17, 2013, hearing, the Court finds that 17 the government has complied with its discovery obligations under Fed. R. Crim. P. 16, 18 and has provided all relevant Jencks materials to Ogilvie. The rest of Ogilvie’s requests 19 are irrelevant, burdensome, and vexatious.

20 21 E. Ogilvie’s Motion for Clarification of Rules and Reconsideration of Dismissed Motions (dkt. no. 91)

22 Ogilvie seeks reconsideration of the Court’s February 5, 2013, Order denying 11 23 motions. He argues that the government did not file a memorandum of points and 24 authorities in response to his motions, in violation of the Local Rules. Ogilvie seeks 25 clarification as to the applicability of the Local Rules that require a memorandum of 26 points and authorities, implying that the Court’s failure to enforce that Local Rule 27 governing points and authorities demonstrates that the Local Rules, Fed. R. Crim. P., 28 and Fed. R. Evid. have not been followed. Ogilvie claims that failure to enforce the 1 Local Rules also violates his religious freedom rights, presumably because it will lead to 2 his criminal liability that itself violates his right to free exercise. The Court also finds 3 these arguments to lack merit. There is no basis for this motion, since the government 4 has properly opposed and filed memoranda of points and authorities in support of each 5 response. This motion must be denied.

6
7 F. Ogilvie's Motion that Court Withdraw its Order that Creates a Substantial Burden upon Defendant's Religious Exercise (dkt. no. 94)

8 Ogilvie challenges the Court's February 15, 2013, Order that appointed Ogilvie 9 stand-by counsel. He argues in his Motion that he holds a religious belief that does not 10 allow him to be represented by counsel, and that the Court's Order therefore violated 11 his religious expression rights. Ogilvie clearly misunderstands the role of stand-by 12 counsel.

13 It is well established that a trial court may appoint stand-by counsel "even over 14 the defendant's objection — to relieve the judge of the need to explain and enforce basic 15 rules of courtroom protocol or to assist the defendant in overcoming routine obstacles 16 that stand in the way of the defendant's achievement of his own clearly indicated goals." 17 McKaskle v. Wiggins, 465 U.S. 168, 182 (1984). Stand-by counsel's role is not to 18 deprive a pro se defendant's right to speak for himself, but to help "ensure the 19 defendant's compliance with basic rules of courtroom protocol and procedure." Id. 183.
20 Here, the Court appointed stand-by counsel for Ogilvie after reviewing the initial series 21 of motions filed and determining that stand-by counsel is needed to ensure compliance 22 with the basic procedures governing proceedings in this Court. Thus, Ogilvie does not 23 face any burden from the Court's order. His Motion is denied.

24 G. Ogilvie's Renewed Motion to Dismiss Under RFRA (dkt. no. 148)

25 Ogilvie's Renewed Motion to Dismiss simply rehashes many of the same 26 arguments presented in earlier discussed motions. As it is duplicative of Ogilvie's 27 previous filings, good cause exists to deny the Motion.

28 **///

1 II. TRACY'S MOTIONS

2 A. General Arguments

3 The majority of the pending motions before the Court were filed by Defendant 4 Tracy. In addition to these motions, Tracy filed numerous self-styled "Notices of 5 Default." These Motions are mostly nonsensical, and lack any coherent basis to award 6 Tracy any of his requested relief. Similarly, Tracy's numerous Notices all lack merit and 7 were frivolously filed.

8 At the April 17, 2013, hearing, Tracy joined in the arguments made by Ogilvie in 9 support of the Indictment's dismissal, and also argued that the United States' failure to 10 seek permission of the local sheriff of his hometown invalidates his criminal prosecution.
 11 This argument is false: the United States need not notify, inform, or involve state or local 12 law enforcement officials in its prosecutorial functions. For this reason, as well as those 13 mentioned above, the criminal indictment against Tracy was validly issued, and the 14 Court has jurisdiction over Tracy's criminal prosecution.

15 B. Tracy's Motions to Quash (dkt. nos. 66, 67, 68, 71, 100, 101, 114, 112, 16 71)

17 Tracy filed numerous motions seeking to quash or strike the United States' 18 responses to various motions. As explained during the April 17, 2013, hearing, litigants 19 may file responses to any motions brought by opposing parties. Motions to strike those 20 responses are granted only in exceptional circumstances. Disagreement with the merits 21 of a particular response is not one of those circumstances. As Tracy fails to provide any 22 appropriate reason to strike or quash the government's filings in this case, his Motions 23 to Quash are summarily denied.

24 C. Tracy's Motion to Dismiss Indictment for Lack of Underlying Charge 25 (dkt. no. 72)

26 Tracy argues in this motion that the government manipulated the jurisdiction of 27 the court to attempt to imprison Tracy under a one-person conspiracy. He challenges

28 ///

1 the existence of a conspiracy, arguing that the government failed to show that another 2 co-defendant acted along with him.

3 For the same reasons discussed above, Tracy's argument here is specious. The 4 government is required to prove that Tracy entered into an agreement with another to 5 obstruct a lawful function of the government by deceitful or dishonest means, and that 6 he acted at least once in furtherance of that agreement. The Indictment supports these 7 essential elements, since both Ogilvie and Tracy were indicted together, apparently as 8 members of the same conspiracy. To the extent Tracy seeks to attack this allegation, he 9 can do so at trial. A pre-trial motion to dismiss is not the appropriate vehicle to contest 10 the facts that underlie a criminal indictment.

11 D. Tracy's Motions to Recuse (dkt. no. 74 and 87)

12 Tracy filed two substantially identical Motions to Recuse. Both of these motions 13 are nonsensical. They identify the religious organization that Tracy belongs to as a 14 state, and request this judge's recusal because she failed to contact a member of the 15 religious organization labeled as an ambassador. It is hard to decipher what these 16 Motions say, and they certainly do not present any basis for recusal.

17 E. Tracy's Motions to Dismiss With Prejudice (dkt. nos. 103 and 121)

18 These motions are largely nonsensical motions seeking to dismiss the entire 19 indictment. Tracy argues that the grand jury proceeding that found probable cause to 20 indict was held illegally because only one party was present, and the accused (or any 21 representative of the accused) was not. This is obviously not a legitimate legal objection 22 to the secrecy of a grand jury proceeding, as grand juries are convened without notice 23 to a potential accused.

24 Tracy also appears to seek dismissal on the grounds that he is affiliated with a 25 religious organization that is organized as a sovereign state which cannot be the subject 26 of any criminal indictment. There is no evidence in the motion to demonstrate any kind 27 of diplomatic status of any recognized state. There is no evidence that anything close

28 ///

1 to a “diplomatic immunity” applies here. This motion lacks any evidentiary support, and 2 must be denied.

3 Tracy also incorrectly argues that the government failed to file any points and 4 authorities in support of its briefings. As described above, this argument is meritless.

5 F. Tracy’s Motion to Dismiss Stipulation (dkt. no. 117)

6 Tracy moves to dismiss the Stipulation to Continue Trial (dkt. no. 113) between 7 the parties because it was not signed by the Court. This is a meritless motion, since 8 stipulations do not need to be signed by the Court. They are treated as orders once they 9 are signed by the Court, as this particular stipulation was two days after it was filed.
10 (Dkt. no. 116). Accordingly, this Motion is denied.

11 12 G. Tracy’s Motion to Notice Court Regarding Document Number 93 (dkt. no. 122)

13 This is a notice filed by Tracy that he cannot attend the hearing on April 17, 2013, 14 due to a medical condition. As the hearing was held on April 17, 2013, as scheduled 15 with Tracy’s presence, this Motion is denied as moot.

16 H. Tracy’s Notices

17 Tracy filed numerous “Notices,” including notices entitled “Notices of Default” and 18 notices to inform of his medical conditions. These Notices are improper and will be 19 stricken.

20 III. CONCLUSION

21 After reviewing the numerous motions filed by the parties, and considering the 22 parties’ arguments during the April 17, 2013, hearing, the Court finds good cause to 23 deny all of the pending motions. As mentioned during the hearing, Defendants are 24 informed that their objections, as memorialized in their motions, have been preserved 25 for appeal.

26 Defendants are also instructed not to file any further filings that contain 27 duplicative arguments brought in any of the motions disposed of above, or risk sanction 28 from the Court.

1 Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Defendant Bret Ogilvie's Motions
2 (dkt. nos. 52, 53, 54, 91, 94, and 148) are DENIED.

3 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Linwood Tracy's Motions (dkt. nos.
4 71, 72, 74, 76, 77, 78, 87, 103, 110, 111, 117, 118, 119, 121, and 122) are DENIED.

5 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the following "Notices" are stricken from the 6 records: Docket numbers 34-38, 39-40, 58, 60, 73, 86, 88-90, 102, 115, 120, 125-127, 7 129-147.

8 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that documents relating to discovery, which need 9 not be filed with the Court, be stricken. These documents are docket numbers 47, 55, 10 56 and 57.

11 IT IS SO ORDERED.

12 DATED THIS 19th day of April 2013.
